SIR: There is a nation adjacent to usfor 1,800 miles is coterminous with theirs. n; but they have gradually and persistently assimilated their ttical fustitutions to ours. They are engaged, like, us, in the periment of self-government.

The fortunes of this people can sever be indifferent to us. If de prevail among them, it reacts to our disadvantage. If domestic tranquillity and material prosperity, we estitutional liberty; but that prospect was blasted ention of France.

In intervention may terminate ere long, but its persus will remain, and will present obstacles of a very cete to the restoration of public order in the Mexication of the propoun nations admit this. We curedves perce has been talk of a Pretectorate, to be extinuized exico; and several English and French papers have lear. The policy of sending fulled States troops tride interference, unions say what they will in favor of a United counte over Mexico, now while it is merely talked ere consummated, they would be the first to assist unselves of committing what we have reproached.

That would not be strictly true, for we should,
instead of deposing, the government of the e's choice. But there would be truth enough in int stud sting. For such a Protectorate would be intervention for a good vurnous, doubtless; but

However undesirable it is, as a general rule, to rou into debt, there are certain exceptional epochs in the lives of mon and in the career of nations, when they may properly seek, and are fairly entitled to obtain, aid from their fellow-creatures. Shapwrecked scames, plandered travelers, have just chains for assistance. Mexico is in a similar condition. Her territory has been overrun by an invaling force, which scapes the tile of maranders only by its numbers and by the impudence of its usurpation. Her leads have been had waste, her towns and villages pillaged, and her people plandered. Under shameless pretexia the invalers existed her scaperts and appropriated to their own use her revenues from imports. As these comprise four-fifths of the entire resources of her Government, and have been withheld from her by superior force for more than four years, her finances have been ruised, and her credit-frought to a low obt. Plandered and impoverished at she has been, she has faithfully helped herself before asking help from others. The wonder is that with her crippted resources she should have been able to make head as she has done, throughout five dreary years, against the encroachments of an adversary so wealthy and powerful as France.

Now, at last, she comes to our people and, asks of them ten.

been able to make head as she has done, throughout five dreary years, against the encroschments of an adversary so wealthy and powerful as France.

Now, at last, she comes to our people and asks of them temporary aid to assist her in recovering her lost position/and in consolidating her shattered Government.

Mexico has hitherto resorted but sparingly to the common resource of nations when financially pressed. Her entire foreign debt, with interest to the first of July hast, was about $95,000,000. that is, she acknowledges herself indebted to foreign capitalists in that sum, and will ultimately have to pay it; but it is doubtful whether she ever received from them $40,000,000 in hard cash. The rest went in discount on her bonds, large commissions, and similar expenses. She has no internal debt; that was puid off from the proceds of the church kinds.

About a year ago the Sepublican Government of Mexico offered, in the market of the United States, a public loan to the amount of $20,000,000, secured in part by a proportion of fariff duties, in part by farming and mineral lands. It bore interest at 7 per cent in gold, and was offered at 40 per cent discount. If any mation was ever justified in asking all as a borrower, surely, it was the Repulsie of Mexico, in the straits to which by foreign speliation, she finds herself reduced.

The lean was couldly received. Mean sympathy there was for the straighting Republic all over our country. But Wall-st, expitalists do not astudy valones their parse strings from sympathetic impalies. A very considerable amount was disposed of for cash.

Purclasses, but to a moderate amount only, of arms, muni-rough. Purchases, but to a moderate amount only, of arms, muni-Parchases, but to a moderate amount only, of arms, munitions, and equipments of war, steam vessels, and other articles of immediate military necessity, have been made for Mexican bonds rated at sixty cents to the dollar. But when we take into account the liferense between cash and credit rates, she that the sixty cents is in currency only, and that the Loun is a gold loan, it may will be doubted whether Mexics actually realizes from such small portion of her American tona as she has thus disposed of, a larger per centage than she obtained, in former doys, from her loans, to the opinists of Europe.

These are ruinous rates, such as would creak any hard-driven debtor who should resort to to them. To, obtain $40 then to pay, as inferest on that $40 until repaid, $7 a year (in other words, at the rate of secontess and a haif per cent annual interest), and finally to restore $100 of capital for every such $40 receives—is a grievous imposition. Weak States, torn by internal dissensions, have often to submit to such terms, but they are not the less grievous on that account.

and discensions, have often to submit to such terms, but they are not the less grievous on that account.

We ought not, in trinstages, to think harshly of the speculators. They seek safe investments; and if investments of a precurious character are offered, it is fair enough that they should demand payment for the risk. Beside, it is better like to abould obtain arms and money even at such exception trates than not to obtain them at all. The bravest men, armed with sey thes and pitchfork, cannot withstand well-appointed troops; nor can a Government, out of for years from its legitimate resources, be redstablished and maintained without revenues temporarily advanced, until her segments, and her financial system shall be put in full operation, and her financial system shall be remains in their bands, also must suffer the loss of shall be built up anew.

Nevertheirs, Mexico has fallen into the hands of speculators, and if she remains in their bands, she must suffer the loss of gains of militions, if even at such sacrifice she can regain the position which, by no fault of her own, she lost. Can we, with safety to corredves, extricate her from this precarious state?

We might lend her snoney. But in the first place, though in the hat is months we have reduced our national debt by $280,00,000, yet it is still nearly two thirds as large as that of England and it is undestrable to add to it, as we must do if we make advances. She does not not all nearly two thirds as large as that of each divinces to file liepublic of Mexico. Secondif, she does not not all such a local of our Government. From us, as a mitton, she does not need money. She needs national credit, seeing that the French invasion has prestrated here. That eveld restored, she can obtain mency from private individuals among us, without drawing a dollar from the exchequer of the United Scates.

Whether, in case we lend to Mexico our national credit—erel.

Let us look at the matter in a business point of view. In the
this place, the sum guaranteed, whatever it may amount to is definite; not involving, like military aid, future expenditure which so man can calculate. In the second place, a sation of which so man can calculate. In the second piace, a nation of cight millions, with peace and a stable government-refetablished, and with a public debt of $25,000,000 only in not likely to have serious difficulty in meeting a moderate additional obligation; but finally, and chiedy, we argently need, in order to secure exif and entrance to our Pacific possessions from the south, a partion of Mexican territory, of which that country has heretofore evinced a willingness to dispose. The mouth of the Colorado (the Mississippi of our richest Pacific possessions, crossing them from north to south) is now in a foreign country; any day it may be in an enemy's country. The interests of California, of Arisona and of Nevada, as imperatively demand a change in our southern boundary on the Pacific, as did the Mississippi in the hands of the French.

We need Lower California, the strip from the month of the Colorade north to ear present boundary line, and either a triangle cast of the upper partion of the Gulf, to the Arizona line, orfsine, if it can be had a line from Ganymas castwardly to the Rio Grande. Either boundary would give in sthe concurrent navigation of the Gulf, and the control of its upper portion. Until these are obtained, we are shat out, on the south, from our own possessions—unable to reach them without passing through foreign territory.

Under such circumstances, it would be fortunate if Mexico.

Add to this that when we begin such a movement—when we send the great regiment across the Rio Grando—it is impossible to sayswhere that pelicy may end, and what expense will be incurred in presecuting it to completion. The cost of such a move might run to hundreds of millious, swelled as it would be pendembered to be included. This is evidently the safest and most economical thing to do, the substance of distant transportation.

This is evidently the safest and most economical thing to do, the predently done. It is what the Mexicans themselves desire. It is what the Mexicans themselves desire. It is what the Mexicans themselves desire. It is what the Mexicans flowerment has sought to bring about.

However undesirable it is as a general rule, to run into debt, there are certain exceptional epochs in the lives of monand in the career of nations, when they may properly seek, and are fairly entitled to obtain, aid from their fellow-creatures. Shaperecked scames, plandered travelers, have just chains for assistance. Mexicon is in a similar condition. Her territory has been everrously as invading force, which secapes the tile of maraviders only by its numbers and by the impadence of its usurpation. Her bruils have been kind wate, berstowns and villages pillaged, and her people plandered. Under shameless pretexts the invaders seized her seaports and appropriated to their own use her revenues from imports. As these comprises four-fifths of the entire resources of her Government, and have been withheld from her by superior force for more than four years, her finances have been raised, and her credital prought to the season of the resources of her Government, and how the season of water at once.

But aside for the withdrawed of the withdrawed of a better would be a departure, too, there is headed of excited to deptine of the withdrawed of a band band and abandosmae of the occupation of the wither contents of the politic part of the withdrawed of a part of the withdrawed of a band hard excited to deptine of the withdrawed settle the matter at onco.

But aside from mere selfish considerations, is nothing due from us to our position as a nation? Power entails moral responsibilities. To whom much is given of him shall much be required. The embers of a war against Republicanism—a war conducted under the black flag, regulated by decrees so bloody and barbarons that they outrage a civilized age—any smoulder, for anglet one can see to the contrary, throughout yours to come.
Holding the balance of power, as we do, in this Western Hemisphere, are we to suffer this, in defiance of our protest; in defiance of Ebristian principle; in defiance of the sympathies of our people with the down-trouden patriots of Mexico, in defiance of the indigration of our people, who have not forgotten, and will not forget, how a European Potentate, when our own star was waning—when we had not a man nor a deliar te spare—taking basing advantage of our position, undertook to foist a despotisa upon America, under our very eyes. Ask our people, and they will locally declare, that in the question of succour to Mexico—overbonce by foreign tyranny as she has been—is involved duty than the mere assertion of the national dignity—a duty to our age and to our country—to the cause of Constitutional Liberty and of Republican Institutions.

The following is the official report of the Eric Hailway Company for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1865 and 1866, prefaced by extracts from the report of the President made to the shareholders in the Spring of 1866: dent made to the shareholders in the Spring of 1890:

"The condition of the Company in all its working departments was never better, and the prospect of being able to operate the road economically is most cheering.

Geopping an advantageous position for the carrying trade between the Adlantic and the great West, and having a gauge specially adapted to secure site comfort of pussengers, it is already a favorite route with the public, and must continue to receive a fair share of the public patronage.

Entertaining these views, therefore, the Directors feel justified in anticipating most satisfactory results from the operations of the road, during the coming and future years; and will spare no exertions to enable it to sustain the high reputation it has already acquired."

The satisfactory results so confidently predicted is shown in the following comparative statement, viz.:

But this is not all, so far as the unfortunate stockholders, preferred and common, are concerned It is apparent from an examination of the figures of the annual report in connection with the Engineer's report (Sept. 30) that what has been called dividends have been made from fresh money got by the sale of bonds and stock.
